

Meet Sava

Empowering independence through workforce development.

After 25 years working in the medical field, Sava of Enola was starting over and needed help. He had experienced medical issues making it impossible to keep up with a physically demanding job. He found the guidance and support he needed through Road to Success.

Road to Success is United Way of the Capital Region's community initiative to help people get – and keep – jobs with opportunities for advancement. The program also helps with support services like child care, transportation, and clothing to ensure people have the tools they need to succeed.

Sava worked with Lisa Byrne, Road to Success case manager, to find a job at Member's 1st Federal Credit Union where he works in the customer service department. Sava has been employed for more than a year and looks forward to growing his career within the organization.

"I have always worked to help others," Sava says. "Now, I get to help people through customer service."

For Sava, getting a job has been about so much more than earning a paycheck. He has regained his independence and confidence.

"The program is great," Sava adds. "It was exactly what I needed to get back on track to care for my family."
